

WOMEN'S WASHABLE GLOVES FOR SPRING

Correctly fashioned styles to wear with one's first spring costume. "Women who know" will come to this Glove Sale to-day and gratify their sense of taste and economy.

At 95c

FEELLESS P. K. GLOVES, with over-stitched seam and reinforced thumb. White stitched with black, black, grey and tan stitched with white. The very slight of them will take your fancy. Were $1.50. For today only, per pair...95c

At 48c

This specially priced Lady's ALL-WOOL KNIT GLOVES will give you warmth and service. Fits close to wrist, and is made in black and all leading colors. Per pair to-day...48c

At $1.00

Here's a WALKING GLOVE made by the famous Ireland Bros. It's stitched with the heavy knit seam in tan and white. Single pair are...$1.00

At $1.50

OUR FRENCH CHAMOIS 1-BUTTON Washable Glove is just the thing to go with your new street costume. Made from the choicest selection of skins, in white and natural. Marked, a pair...$1.50

At $3.00

10-BUTTON ENGLISH FRENCH CHAMOIS—One of our best adapted gloves for washing, and it wears fine, too. In white only. Priced at...$3.00

At $3.50

ELBOW LENGTH GLACE FRENCH KID Gloves—Made in black, tan and white, with Cleopatra buttons. Just right for street wear. Per pair...$3.50

Kaufmann & Company

Social and Personal

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic William Scott, of 903 West Franklin Street, returned to their home this week, after spending several weeks in Panama. Mr. and Mrs. Scott also visited in Cuba and Florida while in the South.

Entertains in Washington. Mrs. Beverley Randolph Mason entertained at a large reception last week from 4 to 6 at her home in Florida Avenue, Washington. The entire first floor was thrown open and elaborately decorated with palms, smilax and flowers. Mrs. Mason received at the head of the stairway, which had an artistic arrangement of calla lilies. Pink sweetpeas and carnations banked the mantels in the drawing-room and baskets of them were placed about the room. The refreshments were served in the large hall and adjoining room. The tea table was decorated in pink flowers in a shower design forming a centerpiece. On the stage an orchestra played behind a screen of smilax and bay trees. Receding with Mrs. Mason were her daughters, Misses Mason and Mrs. Moffett. They were assisted by Miss Clark, Miss Steger, Mrs. Buxton and Mrs. La Crosse. Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. William B. Lamar and Mrs. Galloway. Mrs. Davis Wills and Mrs. Roger Bonner served the punch. Others assisting were Mrs. J. Rozier Claggett, Mrs. Robert M. Heth, Mrs. Taylor Burke, formerly Miss Ida Mason, of Richmond.

Returned Home. Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Ellett, of West Franklin Street, have been spending several weeks in Nashville with Mrs. Walker Edwards, and many beautiful parties were given incident to their stay there. Mr. Ellett has left to attend a conference in Chattanooga, and Mr. Ellett returned to Richmond last night.

Small Affairs. Miss Margaret Carrington, of Grove Avenue, entertained a few friends at an informal tea drinking this week, in honor of her house guest, Miss Mitchell, of New York.

Miss Virginia Whiteley entertained at a bridge party yesterday afternoon at the Country Club. Three tables were played.

Recent Weddings. Mrs. Lillie Bauman Heeke announces the marriage of her daughter, Josephine Louise, to Andrew Benjamin Anthony. The marriage took place in St. Patrick's Church, Washington, D. C., Monday, February 4, the Rev. Father James Smith officiating. The young couple were accompanied to Washington by Mrs. John Teffy, Mrs. L. B. Heeke, mother of the bride, and Mrs. A. C. Anthony, mother of the bridegroom.

After a Northern tour, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony will make their home in Richmond.

A wedding of much interest here, which took place Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, was that of Miss Marie Sydney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Sydney, of Disputant, Va., and John Ryland Hawkins, of Richmond. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride in Disputant, Va., the Rev. Dr. Cave of Bowling Green, officiating. The house was beautifully decorated with running cedar, palms and potted plants. The only attendants were W. H. Sydney and Mr. Drum, both of Richmond. The bride was gown in a blue broadcloth suit and carried violets and lilies of the valley. Only the family were invited.

After a two-weeks' tour South they will be at home at 600 Twenty-seventh Street, Woodland Heights, Richmond.

Of Virginia Interest.

Says a Baltimore paper: "Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Brown gave a handsomely appointed dinner, followed by dancing, Friday evening at their residence, 12 Cathedral Street, in honor of their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Aldrich, of New York. Their guests, numbering forty, were seated at four tables, decorated with different spring flowers in gold baskets, as centerpieces, with candelabra shaded to correspond."

"The other guests, in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Aldrich, were: Mrs. Brown's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. B. Howell Griswold, Jr.; Mrs. Brown's sister, Mrs. William L. James; Mr. and Mrs. James Swan Frick, Mr. and Mrs. N. Winslow Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Ral. P. Ford, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Tansill Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll, of Carrollton; Mr. and Mrs. Sherlock Swann, Mr. and Mrs. Miles White, Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Harris Brewster, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Blackwell, Judge and Mrs. James P. Gorter, Mr. and Mrs. J. Parvianza Bonnal, Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Brooks, Jr., Miss Virginia Latrobe, Mr. William F. Lucas, Jr., Mr. Henry Winslow Williams, Mr. Albert C. Ritchie, Mr. W. Ewing Harvey and Mr. Graeme Turnbull."

Miss Helen Michaels, of Sioux City, Iowa, is the guest of Miss Lucy Beveridge.

Lewis Grant is spending sometime with friends in Baltimore and New York.

Bishop O'Connell has returned to the city, after spending several days in Northern Virginia.

Miss Katherine Cox, of Rossmore, is the guest of friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. James Harvie have returned from a brief visit to Huntington, W. Va.

Miss Marian Biddle has returned to her home in Philadelphia, after spending the week with Miss Belle Winard.

Miss Watson has returned to the city, after a week in Lexington.

Mrs. Jackson Davis and Miss Mary Davis are visiting relatives in Georgia.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Cook, Jr., are spending sometime at Capron.

Mrs. Ryland Gwatney is spending the winter in Louisiana country.

Charles Hansell, of Fredericksburg, was in Richmond for a few days this week.

Mrs. W. W. Wright is spending sometime in New York.

Mrs. William MacLeod, of New York, will arrive to-day to be the guest of relatives for a week.

Mr. Robert Green and son have left to make their future home in Newport News.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bryan have returned from a visit to Columbia, S. C.

Miss Kathleen Bruce has returned to the city, after spending a week with her sister, Mrs. Kinsolving, in Baltimore.

Mrs. Peyton Wise left yesterday to spend sometime in New York.

INDIAN CITIZENSHIP DAY.

Will be celebrated at Hampton Institute this afternoon.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Hampton, Va., February 7.—The twenty-sixth annual celebration of Indian Citizenship Day will be held to-morrow afternoon at Hampton Institute at 2:30 o'clock.

Addresses will be delivered by W. David Owl, a Cherokee Indian of Cherokee, N. C.; George Brown, Chipewa, of Lac du Flambeau, Wis.; Hugh V. Brown, Henderson, Ky.; a negro student representative, Lucy E. Hunter, a Winnebago of Nebraska; Henry Rose Cloud, a Winnebago of Auburn, N. Y.

Extracts from the Dawes bill, passed in 1887, giving Indians the citizenship will be read by Cynthia O. Powdrill, a Pueblo of Ashcroft, Kas. The music will include singing by a Pawnee Indian girl, Caroline Marie, of Pawnee, Okla.; "Indian Cradle Song," by a chorus of Indian boys and girls; a piano duet; and "America."

Fayette A. McKenzie, special agent of the United States Indian Census, in a recent "Southern Workman" article, declared that in 1912 the total Indians taxed numbered 153,325, or 13 per cent; total not taxed, 71,712, or 27 per cent. In 1910 the total number taxed was 21 per cent or 66,497; total not taxed, 78 per cent or 249,138.

New Bank Starts Business. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Fredericksburg, Va., February 7.—The Planters' National Bank of Fredericksburg has just opened its doors for business under most auspicious circumstances. The officers are: Captain M. B. Rowe, president; Captain R. Conroy Vance and Allen Smith, vice-presidents; W. J. Ford, cashier; Paul Karsten, Jr. and H. B. Lane, assistant cashiers. The bank has a capital of $75,000, with $15,000 surplus.

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it in defiance of the commands of the Dean of Christ Church. When taken to task by his august dignitary, he stood up for his rights to such an extent that the dean's connection with Christ Church, but even refused to allow him the "certificate of good conduct" necessary to enable him to enter some other college at the university, presumably Keble College, which had been founded and endowed by his father.

Lord Beauchamp is both rich and generous; is the originator and financial backer of all sorts of philanthropic enterprises in the slums of the East End of London, where he has been very active in personal mission.

He has defrayed in connection with the restoration of Worcester's beautiful cathedral. Very well read, he knows a great deal about art and is so devoted that he has often been postponed as on the eve of taking holy orders.

Lord Beauchamp is married to Lady

Victoria, champion of the high church party in Parliament and founder of Keble College at Oxford. On being asked by her host when and where she had met the late Lord Beauchamp, she replied easily: "I never actually saw his lordship, but I have been taking his famous pills regularly for years with the most excellent results."

It is difficult to realize that this high principled and altogether immaculate earl was virtually expelled from the University of Oxford in connection with a ball. The latter was given at Blenheim, and Lord Beauchamp attended it